ed 13 months and 17 days:

Hongkong, June 20th, 1876.

THE condition of Tameui parbour, to which a correspondent called attention in a letter published in yesterday's issue, certainly reflects no credit on the Chinese Government, He states that on tea alone it will this year receive some three hundred thousand dollars, out of which it might be expected that a portion would be devoted to the improvement of the barbour. But there is not, according to our correspondent, a single buoy either at the bar or in the harbour. The authorities are at last, be says, putting up a tide pole, after three years' urging, and perhaps mainly because a small vessel went ashoro recently for want of such a simple and inexpensive contrivance. This is all of a piece, however, with the niggard policy elsewhere displayed by the Chinese Government. Tamsui is certainly not alone in having a grievence of this kind. The anchorage in the river Min at Foochow is filling up very fast, owing to junks being allowed to discharge their mud ballast in the fairway and to the neglect of the authorities to provide steam dredges. At Shanghai the condition of the Woosung bar-that "heaven-sent barrier" as the Chinese term it-has for years been a standing grievance and subject of remonstrance with the Chinese authorities. Tightsin it required constant unportunity on the new Treaty new being proposed to the the part of Foreign representatives to induce the Government to purchase the steam and set to work. Nothing is more difficult. indeed, than to get the Chinese to fulfil lavish enough, on the principle that they cost nothing, and their performance can CHRONICLE AND DIRECTOR's be bestponed—as it usually is ad indefinitum. These delays to carry out work which it is their obvious and acknowledged duty to fulfil are extremely annoying and provoking to foreign merchants and shipowners, who frequently incur loss and trouble thereby. Unfortunately there appears to be no redress. Remonstrances are thrown nway upon a Government apathetic to all but its own self-interest, and often careless even of that when any movement involving a change ing the established order of things is proposed. The changes and improvements to must come sooner or later, however, and if it stands too long in their path it will endanger would do all in its power to promote trade and much by foreign commerce, and a great porbut reasonable to expect in return that she should do her part, in lessoning the many navigating these seas. The very least that her Government could do would be render her ports safe of entry to the mariner, and remove the barriers which the mud and sand constantly silting up in the rivers oppose to navigation. By the appointment of the Hon. C. B. Plun-KETT to the post of Registrar of the Supreme Court much injustice has been done to the Acting Registrar and others in the Colony who had applied for the post, and all of whom had a superior claim. Appointments of any more instance in point. The new Registrar is a scion of the aristocracy, and his friends by whom the appointment has been made, "He may be a man of great ability, and, with experience, may become eminently fitted for the dutics of the post. But he certainly lies not at present any particular qualifications for it that we are aware of. The offices he has filled in the Straits Settlements have scarcely been buttle." the sort to adapt him peculiarly for the one he has just been preferred to. He may have some knowledge of the law; he can have little of the details of the Registrar's Office. But however fit be may prove to be, however thoroughly he may justify his appointment the practice of passing over officials who have spent the best years of their life in the Government service, and reasonably hope for the promotion to which their experience and ability fully entitle them, is one that caunct be too often or too Ningro....... ABDUL Aziz-Khan has elected not to sur vive his downfall. After all, power was dear to this slothful, sensual monarch. When, feeble grasp, he, like Macbeth, began to think that he had lived long enough, and sought an easy means of shuffling off the mortal coil. -He has gone down to his grave, les many another prime before him, unwept, unhonoured, and unsung. He leaves all that can be recorded of him is that he was the lord of many wives, and plunged his kingdom up to the very throat in debt in order to procure the means to support his follies and extravagances. The ex-Sultan was comparatively young, being in his fortytrother. About Medjid, on the 25th June, 1861, and reigned, therefore, about fifteen years. His death will probably be some relief to the Government and to his successor, but will have little influence on the country, as there was no chance of any movement being got up in favour of his restoration. His deposition and tragic death urnish—one—more—instructive lesson—to monarchs, showing that even in benighted Turkey the reign of oppression and corruption may be pushed too far. In this instance, however, the revolution was not caused by internal misrule alone. It arose from the refusal of ABDUL AZIZ to surrender anything from the Privy Purse towards replenishing the exhausted War Treasury, and his indisposition to promote any reforms whereby economies could be effected. The Ministers saw nothing ahead but the disruption of the kingdom. Ruin, in fact, stared them and the country in the face. AN OLDEN MEMORY. DY A. TENTLETON.

I knew a gentle girl. With radiant, soul-lit eyes That rivalled the golden lamps of night, High hung in the state skies-I remember her sunny smiles - That shed a soft light around, Like the first bright rays of the blushing morn, When spring-time with beauty is crowned.

I remember the subarn carls, That round her neck floatingly feli; Where, nestling amid their silken wealth, The conlight loved to dwell. remember her faultless brow, That the throne of Innocence seemed The modest finsh of her blooming cheek, Where Health's fairest roses gleamed.

I romember her gladsome stop That of yore thrilled my listening car: Her silver laugh by the light winds borns-Her smile to my heart so dear, I remember her timid glauco, That drooped 'neath th' admiring gaze The mentling blush—the ball drawn sigh-Sweet heart tales of other days. . .

I remember her valley-home, With the green-covered forest nigh : The ann lit bower where the roses grew. And the brook that went murmoring by. I remember the shadowy dell-The haunt of the housewife bee," And the towering elm, where the song-bird trilled
